EE3204 Computer Communication Networks – I (Sem 2 2017-18)
Lecturer: A/P Mohan Gurusamy

User Accounts (Login id and password):

If UNIX/Linux accounts have earlier been created for you for some other module, the same will be used for EE3204 as well. Otherwise, new user accounts have been created for you in the Unix/Linux lab. Your password is com,3204

If your matric number is a0515555N then login id is a515555n (i.e. replace a0 by a)
If your matric number is u066666B then login id is e66666b (i.e. replace u0 by e)

Instructions:

Please refer the instructions below for lab venue and account usage details.

1. The above A/C is only for the UNIX WorkStations in Cales-1 of eITU (Block E1, Level 04, E1-04-11 ~ E1-04-14)

2. To check your disk-space allocation, command: quota -v
   If more disk-space is needed, go to:
   http://www.eng.nus.edu.sg/eitu
   -- click on [SERVICES]
   -- click on [Forms and Services] for Disk Quota Request

Strongly suggest you to change password after you first log-in.
 CHANGE OF PASSWORD :
----
    * Issue command : yppasswd
    * Passwords must be -  between 6-chars to 8-chars
       1st char an alphabet (a to z)
       next few chars must be mixture of both alphabets & numbers (or allowed special chars)

       Your password is changed successfully when you see the following message:
          The NIS password has been changed on hpfs.

       for more details regarding password restrictions,
        you may issue command : man yppasswd

    * If error message "ACCESS DENIED" is encountered while changing password, it means the Password Database is being locked. In this case, user has to change password later on.
    * Possible reasons of a locked Database:
      - Administrator is updating it e.g to create new users
      - a Backup Job is running & happen to be backing up the Database at that moment
      - Other users are updating their passwords at that same moment
